About Yorkville University

The vision of Yorkville University is to provide accessible, practitioner-oriented programs leading to and enhancing professional careers. At Yorkville University, students of all ages and backgrounds are equipped with the skills they need, to make the progress they want, in a supportive, collaborative and interactive environment.

“As Canadian higher education has been called upon to take thoughtful and decisive action towards Truth and Reconciliation, I am pleased to announce our commitment to enhancing accessibility to our innovative undergraduate and graduate programs. Our Indigenous Student Tuition Bursary is just the latest initiative we have launched in demonstration of our ongoing commitment to equity, diversity, and inclusion.”

Julia Christensen Hughes
President, Yorkville University

“What brought me to Yorkville University was my interest in finding ways to further Truth and Reconciliation through leadership. I had just applied to be the first Truth and Reconciliation Administrator in our district and wanted to make sure that reconciliation would be embedded in each area of my work, whether in the classroom or in leadership. Yorkville had the type of program that was a good fit for me at the time as someone in a multifaceted and challenging role.”

Launched in celebration of the National Indigenous Peoples Day, the Indigenous Student Tuition Bursary offers a 25% tuition bursary to all Indigenous Students in Canada. Created after a series of consultation sessions with Indigenous students, the bursary is offered with no limit on the number of students who can receive the bursary.

To be eligible, students must be Canadian citizens or permanent residents of Canada.

Yorkville University requires one form of documentation which supports Indigenous ancestry. Please refer to the application form below for examples of acceptable documentation.

This bursary cannot be received in conjunction with any other bursaries offered by Yorkville University.

Indigenous applicants are also eligible for waived admission fees to any of Yorkville University programs.
